“The story of Frankland Estate is one born in the isolated natural terrain of South West Australia, and the foresight of a prominent scientist. In 1956 renowned US viticulturist Dr Harold Olmo identified the potential of the Frankland River region to produce wines comparable to those of Bordeaux, France.

We believe that great wine is created by the soil and the vineyard environment. By nurturing the soil our wines have developed a depth, complexity and intensity of flavour

Ferngrove Wines is one of the world's most isolated wine estates. Selected in 1988 for its favourable viticultural, the Ferngrove valleys and slopes have the rare combination of rugged, classically West Australian ancient soils and the cooling influence of the converging Southern and Indian Oceans.

This unique setting allows grapes to ripen at a slower rate, allowing the winemaking team the time to cultivate and nurture vines to their absolute best”.

“Lange Estate is a family-owned and operated farming business in the Frankland River wine region. The Lange family has been cultivating and farming in rural Western Australia for five generations. The vineyard was established in 1997 and, more recently, the family has embarked on creating a wine label which consists of three ranges showcasing the best of the estates fruit.

The vineyard has a high elevation which is unique for Western Australian conditions and when combined with the red jarrah gravel loam soils it leads to wines of great intensity.
